PRESS RELEASE

'Lehman, Lee and Xu to represent 5 Star Basketball China' – 9 October 2008

Beijing based law firm Lehman Lee & Xu's sports law practice group has been chosen to represent the U.S. based Five-Star Basketball program in China.

Five Star Basketball has coached acclaimed NBA athletes Patrick Ewing, LeBron James, Michael Jordan, and Shawn Kemp, amongst others. Since 1966 Five Star Basketball has provided guidance, mentorship and opportunities to coaches, parents and players. Hosting overnight, day, and specialty camps for boys and girls 9-18 years old, Five Star Basketball aims to provide a focused, structured learning environment developing dedication, passion and skill.

Five-Star Basketball camps were offered between September 29th and October 3rd at the Dulwich School in Beijing. "This was the first and certainly not the last camp!" emphasized Edward Lehman.

A former NCAA track athlete and Chief Representative of Geneva-based International Association of Sports Lawyers for ten years, Mr. Lehman established Sports Beijing, a non-profit organization promoting sports in Beijing's school system. "Athletics engages the mind and body; sports teaches youngster what it means to work together and establish a team community," comments Mr. Lehman. "The Five-Star Basketball program is the first of its kind in Beijing and we are extremely excited to represent such a well accomplished and successful program."

Edward Lehman, a Chinese resident for 21 years, is the only foreign director of a Chinese firm. Lehman, Lee & Xu is a prominent Chinese corporate law firm and trademark and patent agency with offices in Beijing, Shanghai, Shenzhen, Hong Kong, Macau, and Mongolia. The firm is recognized as a leading expert in corporate law and an active member of the Beijing community.
